

Anthropology

Univerisité, Laval, Cite Universitaire, Québec,

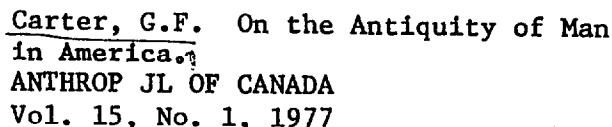

P. G. Canada

1230 YORK AVENUE · NEW YORK, NEW YORK 10021

G/K 7 PY

Please favor me with a reprint of the following item, which has come to my attention through Current Contents. 410 +

YJ Carter
Rt 3 Box 224A
Bryans, Tx, 77801
S. Brooksville, Me
04617 (tel. 504)

I am not sure which one of my two recent articles in that journal you are asking for. One, written on request by the AAAS 18 years ago and ~~then~~ turned down, and reprinted recently by Lee shows what I thought at that time. A very long (whole number) edition of my thinking in 1977 appeared in late 1977 or early 1978-- and I cant remember which. ----- I just remembered: a bibliography arrived the other day. You are calling for the 1977 (prepared nearly 20 years earlier article.) You might be interested also in the 1978 article. E. L. Davis has just written to say that she accepts the "Cartifacts" now as artifacts-- a major victory, for the reality of the " broken stones" as man made objects has been hotly disputed for decades. Other "oppositionists" are now saying that my dating is conservative (!!!). And, Alan Bryan in the book he edited of the papers of the Pacific Science Congress, Vancouver, 1976, (publ 1978) has published a picture of a respectably neanderthaloid skull from the Lagoa Santa region of Brazil. They or their near look alikes are common in early Texas archeology.

I can be reached in the Fall through the Texas A and M Univ,
College Station, Tx if you wish to pursue any of this further.

GFC

